GCA coach Dobson's passion for missions and football takes him worldwide

Football players at Mission TDI camp in Catalunya, Spain huddle for prayer after a day of American football practice.

By Al Stilley

Nine years ago, Andre Dobson placed his passion for missions and football into an undetermined future.

With prayer and about two months later, Dobson, who is entering his second year as football founder and coach at Greenwood Christian Academy (GCA), received his answer in a phone call from, of all places, Spain. That's when Dobson founded Mission Touchdown International (TDI).

"Nine years ago, throughout my teaching career and going on mission and educational trips. I asked the Lord to please open the door and mix my two biggest loves, football and missions, together," Dobson recalled Thursday.

Dobson recalled his path with TDI just four days after arriving back in Greenwood from his eighth mission in Spain where voungsters through high school-age continue to learn about American football. Practically all school-age sports internationally are played through town clubs instead of schools. It's the same way throughout Spain and Europe. Soccer is the No. 1 sport in Spain and followed in popularity by basketball, volleyball, and handball - all played in clubs and professionally. Tennis is mostly through private

As the head of TDI, Dobson handles the logistics and organization of two camps annually during the summer in the heart of Barcelona through the Catalunya Football Club. The first mission begins with a massive one-day promo-tional event that attracts kids of all ages from northeastern Spain and then follows later with a week-long football camp. Elementary school aged youngsters play flag football while older players play in a full contact camp

Through the years, former and current National Football League and college players have helped with the camps, including Greg Romeus and Pat Leece of the Packers, Demetrius Bronson of the Seahawks, Rick Griffith of the Patriots, and Cory Proctor of the Cowboys, University of Central Florida quarterback Marquel Neasmean, and veteran Missouri coaches Sam Knopik and Greg Smith and ex-college coach Scott Metcalf among other notables

"It is so enjoyable bringing so many people together to be with the players over there Dobson said. "I continue to pray about everything we can do with the organization. We've been invited to 12 other countries and I'm trying to figure out how to get them all in.

Although his main focus is Spain, Dobson would like to see TDI do three trips to different countries each year. Future countries could include Egypt, Brazil, UAE, Singapore, China, Uruguay, Israel, Greece, and Uganda.

Each summer that Dobson arrives in Catalunya, he is greeted like Santa Claus because he brings new and auxiliary football equipment with him for the campers who treasure their new gloves, helmet visors, backplates, and mouthpieces.

The equipment they have usually is not new because it is so hard to get and expensive," Dobson said. "I have no idea how they get some of their equipment. They go nuts over any new equipment."

Dobson, who has 25 years of coaching experience, has witnessed firsthand the impact of American football internationally.

"With the growth of social media, everyone is able to see American football," Dobson observed. "It's interesting because each country that is interested in developing football uses the spread offense because that's all they see, and what they see, they do." With his experiences in Spain, Dobson added, "All across the world,

American football is the fastest growing sport, so the opportunities to go over and help educate and grow the game are huge.

Dobson, the son of missionary parents, pointed out that American football in Spain has grown since the 1990s with NFL Europe and the Barcelona Dragons and that the attraction of American football is more and more generational overseas.

"Spain absolutely loves the game," he concluded. He grew up in Calcutta and Cairo and is a graduate of Bellingham

(Washington) High School, and Evangel University in Missouri Dobson contends that some of the obstacles faced during his early TDI sessions in Spain helped him adapt in launching GCA's first-ever football program in 2022 with a small band of 21 players and plenty of improvising with only a 60-yard field and no home field.

'I really feel like God helped set me up for these situations," Dobson said. "We started from zero last year, doing the best we had with what we got. We were late receiving pads and helmets. We used garbage cans for some positions on defense when we ran our offense Dobson is married. He and his wife Brianne, a physician's assistant, have a daughter, Mya, a student at IUPUI; son Trey, a student-athlete at GCA; and son Drew, a "100 percent" soccer player according to his dad.

Dobson made it clear when he came to GCA that he would not waste time in building a winning program. The Cougars won two of four varsity games last season with only 21 players. The callout for this year's team resulted in 31 players. "Kids rise up to the challenges you present to them," Dobson said. "I've already seen that with our team and our program at our school.

When you set the expectations high, the kids will grow to it.' His philosophy is a mission that he carries worldwide with his faith.

Jack Dossey III enjoys move from pavement racing to modifieds on dirt tracks

(SOUTHSIDER VOICE PHOTOS BY AL STILLEY) In the Jack Dossey Motorsports shop, Jack Dossey III prepares his dirt modified race car for action. Dossey has raced this season on three Indiana tracks and two in Ohio.

By Al Stilley

Franklin Township's Jack Dossey III has enjoyed championship success on the Midwest's pavement tracks.

The third-generation driver won successive Jegs/CRA All-Stars Touring championships in 2017 and 2018. He was the 2014 track rookie of the year in CRA late models at Anderson Speedway and in the 2016 touring series. He raced in two ARCA Menard's national championship races in 2018. And he joined the ARCA/CRA Super Series full time in 2019 in the familiar No. 20 Hart's Auto

Speedrome graduate became ARCA/CRA most popular driver recognition for three years through 2019.

He raced against many of the top drivers in NASCAR – Kyle Busch, Daniel Hemric, Eric Jones, and Noah Gragson among others – in CRA and ARCA events.

But then came 2020 and the coronavirus pandemic. Dossey raced in a few events that year that was, indeed, unusual, for many reasons.

"It was weird but more of an eye-opener," Dossey reflected from the Jack Dossey III do? The CRA wasn't playing out for us at the right time."

Dossey, 24, and his dad, record six-time World Figure-8 three-hour endurance champion Jack Dossey, and mom Jennifer Dossey looked around and thought about Legends Cars and possibly racing modifieds at closer dirt tracks, including Circle City Raceway at the Marion County Fairgrounds. In mid-2021, they made the move to cost-effective UMP Modifieds.

The new challenges were Everything I ever knew about racing was on pavement; I'm still trying to forget that and learn everything about dirt because it's the polar opposite," Dossey explained. "I had always wanted to run dirt but the timing had never worked out. And we were burnt out on the traveling." Dossey sold his three pavement late model cars within three weeks and entered the new world of UMP Modified racing. As he pointed out, no longer did they have to travel to a dozen pavement tracks, mostly outside Indiana, and could race at several dirt tracks within the state. They could save money on tire costs; no longer buying eight to 10 sets of tires for pavement events, including practice, qualifying, and the race. With the UMP Modified, they can buy two rear tires for each race.

Since joining the dirt modified circuit, Dossey won the Sherley Unlimited Snow Company UMP Modified championship last year at Circle City Speedway.

"We're comfortable now," Dossey said before preparing his familiar No. 3 modified for his next three races. "I'd like to see where this takes me. The goal right now: I want to win races and just have fun."

Dossey is more prepared for more racing this season on the tour and at Circle City Raceway after adding a second modified to his collection. "Racing is expensive, and as soon as we switched over to dirt, it really became more fun," said Dossey, who has spotted for some long-distance pavement races since. "Some of the best talent is on dirt."

In 2021, Dossey ran eight races at Circle City Raceway. He has branched out to races at Brownstown and Kokomo and Eldora and Atomic dirt tracks

Interestingly, the engine is larger in his dirt car than pavement car. Dossey is powered by 388- and 400-cubic inch motors which gives him power and torque to come off the corners on dirt at top speed.

Having raced in the highhorsepower Figure-8 at the Speedrome and the paved high banks of Anderson and Winchester pavement tracks, Dossey still gets a thrill out of being behind the wheel even

"I'm an adrenaline junkie," he proclaimed. "I get that adrenaline rush right before a race. I do feel like Superman because I just want to race.

He has discovered new sponsorships in his new dirt track ventures. The sponsorships benefit them because we race close to home and close to their businesses," Dossey observed "When we were racing late models on pavement, most of the races were out of state. And that made sponsorships harder to find.'

His major UMP modifieds are sponsored by Wahlburgers in Carmel, Everyday GSD podcast, and Earl's Auction Company. Crew members include Kyle Dunigan, Kurt Gearlds, veteran Pete Harlow, his fiancé Kelsey and mom and dad, Jennifer and Jack Jr.

Dossey also talked about his Bucket List He would like to race a dirt Late Model and midget and sprint cars a few times - proof that racing is in his genes. His dad is a former USAC regional midget series feature winner at the Speedrome.

So anything is possible.

BREAKFAST AND A MYSTERY LADY

A few times each month, I meet with friends, former co-workers and former classmates to enjoy breakfast at The Hotcakes Emporium located at 6845 Bluff Road. We all enjoy attending these events. The staff is wonderful, and the food is great. A couple of the gals seem to enjoy giving me a difficult time. There is this one gal that after accepting my ticket and money at the register, she points to the door and yells, "Get out". We all laugh.

About eight years ago, several of my high school classmates and I were having breakfast. We were enjoying our meal and telling lots of stories to each other. I noticed a couple deep in conversation while sitting at the counter. When I glanced back a bit later, the guy was gone. The lady was still there, and it looked like she was hav ing a very large breakfast. A bit later, she hopped off of her stool and walked over to our table. She started talking to one of us. I believe that it was Ed Tinholder. She told him that she remembered him from a golf course. She also said that he was with his father and described his hair.

Ed smiled and informed her that she might have him mixed up with somebody else because he doesn't play golf and his father was deceased. The lady said that she was sure of her memory and walked back to her seat.

She returned a few minutes later to tell us that she had gone to a liquor store the day before to purchase some pickles, but the clerk was very rude to her. She then informed us that she would never return to that store.

Her physical appearance led us to believe that she might have an oriental background. When one of the guys asked her what country, she was from, she replied Michigan. This banter went on for several minutes before she returned to her breakfast.

She then started chatting with other customers. They appeared to be polite to her but seemed very pleased when she moved on. She returned to our group several times.

One of our guys asked her where her parents lived. She answered northern Indiana, Carmel, Fishers or maybe South Bend. She passed out business cards, but none were hers. She explained that the people identified on those cards were friends or relatives. A couple of times when a guy from our group would get up to use the rest room, she would take his seat until he returned

All of my classmates thought all of the employees were professional and polite under some difficult conditions.

I returned one or two days later and was told that she was there for over three hours. None of the staff members knew how she arrived or departed. They were very relieved when she paid her bill and departed.

I'm pretty sure that none of my buddies will forget that breakfast. Neither will most of the other customers. I smile when I consider that several of the staff are still working at The Hotcakes Emporium and they probably all remember that morning like it was last week.

Eskenazi Health Escalates Fight to Impact Social Determinants of Health in a Positive Way

By Sarah Stelzner, M.D. Eskenazi Health

Last year, Eskenazi Health announced our groundbreaking health equity zone initiative which is a $60 million project that establishes three health equity zones in Indianapolis neighborhoods. These health equity zonesimplement at Eskenazi Health Center sites by 2025—are: Eskenazi Health Center West 38th Street - International Marketplace, Eskenazi Health Center East 38th Street Northeast Corridor and Eskenazi Health Center Grassy Creek Far Eastside. Through our initiative, Eskenazi Health is focusing on social determinants of health in order to increase the life expectancy of those who reside in these health equity zones. The Centers for Disease Control (CDC), describes social determinants of health as "nonmedical factors that influence health outcomes." The following are social determinants of health that we're focusing on: Food as medicine Eating nutritious and healthy food

• Mental health wellness - Fostering resilience and healthy mindset

• Healthy lifestyles -Creating the conditions for healthy living

 Transportation and connectivity - Connecting to health, education, and employment

• Housing - Supporting quality affordable and safe housing • Community con-

nectedness - Building social capital and connection • Safety - Living free of violence, including intimate partner violence and child_abuse • Economic opportunity - Creating pathways to economic self-sufficiency While Eskenazi Health considers all of these social determinants of health vital, transportation and connectivity is an especially important one. Without transportation, patients who live far away may be unable to attend their doctor's appointments, pick up prescriptions and, as a result, do not receive the vital health care that they need. People who don't visit a primary care physician may miss out on important factors of healthcare like screenings. Healthcare is not something that can be an optional part of life.

Transportation and connectivity is a social determinant that can make a wide impact on physical and mental health, the general wellbeing of individuals and communities and access to essential services. The lack of reliable and safe transportation options can block a person's ability to meet fundamental needs.

There's a great need for transportation and public health policies to intervene to overcome transportation barriers, improve upon existing infrastructures and promote the understanding of the population's health as it relates to options for transportation.

Although a lack of transportation negatively affects connectivity between patients and their providers, advancements in telehealth help. Patients who are established with Eskenazi Health and have access to the internet may visit with their providers through video e-Visit connections via computers or mobile devices by using Eskenazi Health MyChart. Common problems for e-Visit appointments include: sinus issues (congestion, ear pain, sneezing), sore throat, cough, eye redness or irritation. heartburn, diarrhea, back pain and discomfort with urination.

Available 24 hours a day, Eskenazi Health MyChart provides patients a convenient way to access their medical records and lets them participate in their health care. It's an efficient way to communicate directly with Eskenazi Health care providers. Eskenazi Health has been serving communities for over 160 years, and we aim to prevent transportation barriers. We have numerous options to ensure that our patients can access care they need. First. E-visits and MyChart video visits are available. Second, our health centers are located near public transportation to help patients without vehicles seek care. We also have a Neighborhood Resources webpage for community programs that assist with paying for gas, cars and bus passes. Eskenazi Health community health workers can go directly to patients to help with care and resources. We're committed to addressing these barriers in order to give great, patientcentered care to our community.
